

COLLABORATIVE LEADERSHIP

EFFECTIVE WAYS FOR TRANSFORMATIVE COLLECTIVE ACTION

with Björn Müller and Anaïs Sägger

How can we lead an effective collaboration & how can leadership emerge from an effective collaboration?

In order to make diversity work (effectively), collaboration needs leadership. This STRIDE Lab offers practical collaboration tools and frameworks and teaches facilitation and leadership skills. You will leave the lab equipped to initiate and co-create transformative collaborative projects, within or in-between teams and organizations. Through interactive inputs, hands-on simulations and case-based peer-learning, you will learn to effectively lead collaboration, enable participatory decision-making and help leadership develop as a collaborative effort.

In this Lab, collaborative leadership - one of the core topics of STRIDE - is our focus.

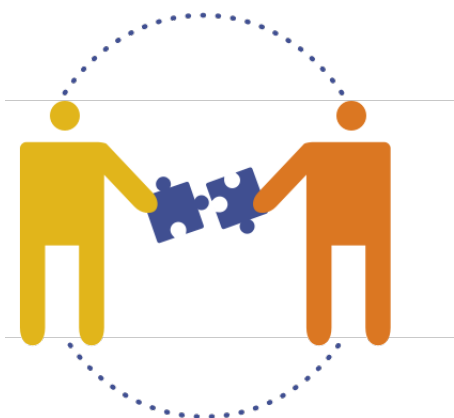

After the Lab, you will be able to:

1. Determine which aspects of collaboration are (not) needed in particular contexts.

2. Differentiate leadership requirements of collaboration.

3. Apply methods which foster collaboration and especially participatory decision-making.

4. Integrate some of the learned methods into your own context to foster collaborative leadership.

WHY

"The grand challenges of our time can only be solved together".

More and more people need and want to collaborate within and between organizations; both in order to solve complex challenges and also to democratize the world of work. For true collaboration to succeed, new attitudes, competencies and tangible skills have to be developed and practiced, both individually and organizationally. Genuine collaboration (as citizens, employees, organisations...) relies on effort, patience and creativity. One of the key challenges for collaboration is thereby how to "marry" it with leadership. If we succeed in this, collaboration can become transformative, both for the collaborators as well as for their work.

HOW

We approach the question of collaborative leadership through an inspiring mix of experiencing, observing, reflecting and experimenting. As a group of peers, we hold space for connections at eye level and for expertise to be shared. We will introduce tools and methods which you can play with hands-on; they will support you in your own processes of creating and taking leadership in environments for which collaboration could be beneficial.

LAB FACILITATORS

Anais Sägesser is passionate about engaging with people to work towards an inclusive society. She sees collaborative leadership as the pathway to impact necessary to address the most pertinent challenges of our time. Together with Björn, she has co-founded STRIDE.

Björn Müller radiates that learning and change are happening on the fringe, in-between and across disciplines, people and things. Passionate about the impact of education and alternative ways of value creation (aka "business"), Björn co-founded STRIDE as well as BEAMagency, a "dream tank" and growing community of transdisciplinary thinkers. Change and impact are key for his various engagements in research and practice.
